A wildly successful actress with a loveable but somewhat unkempt reputation, Catherine Deneuve is much more than a pretty face. Her acting career and looks won her fans from the start. Through the mid- to late-1960s, Deneuve's films were popular worldwide, dealing with such varied topics as existentialism, portraiture, and psychological disorders. One of a rare breed, Catherine Deneuve is the original French superstar. Virtually unknown abroad until she began to emerge as a serious actress at the end of the 1960s, Catherine Deneuve made history with her first commercial film, the Jacques Demy's sexy thriller The Young Girls of Rochefort, released in 1961. With her blatant sexuality and sophisticated style, the 25-year-old was already an established star at that point. Moving into sex roles (other than her trademark; see below), Deneuve took centre stage in female-dominated genres like the Western (Seductress, John Huston's The Beat Generation), gangster flick (The Hard Goodbye, The Deadly Quartet) and war movie (War of the Lions, Battle of Algiers), with her long blonde hair and loose, masculine clothing giving her the air of a rakish young Frenchman. The equal of Brigitte Bardot in her heyday, Deneuve is arguably the most famous French female movie star, with a film career that includes some of her most significant, most successful films. Catherine Deneuve announced her pregnancy in February 2018, and gave birth in June that same year. The French actress gave birth to a baby girl, Lucia Grace
