a revolutionary feature in the prinect workflow is the ability to generate composite papers with the prinect print client, i.e. a paper that consists of several different elements, such as text, graphics, images, and even video, and which can be bound into one. the composite paper is also referred to as a pqc. in principle, a pqc is created from one or more pqc components, e.g. from a number of pqc sheets, pqc inserts, or even from parts of a pqc. the pqc components can be generated in any way. using the special method proposed for the prinect workflow, a pqc is generated on the fly. the pqc technology is only applicable for printouts with images, text, and graphics. the pqc concept can be applied to the assembly of all the printouts that prinect generates for the different print processes, and thus to all the resulting products, e.g. the individual pages of a book. currently, the pqc technology is available for the following print processes: prinect print client,
